Historic Church Near Ashland Burns Just Before Members Arrive For Service.

Two fires fanned by strong winds during yesterday's sub-zero weather destroyed a farm residence near Mansfield and an Ashland county church.

Mansfield and Ashland firemen were summoned to both blazes but were unable to bring them under control after battling them in low temperatures which reached an official mark of four below Sunday night.

Official forecasts promised relief from the cold wave tonight. The temperature reading at noon today was five above zero.

Firemen from No. 2 engine house under Captain Ralph J. Shively were summoned at 4 p. m. yesterday when fire, starting from a defective chimney, razed the dwelling on the Ohio State Reformatory property occupied by the family of D. C. Neibel, hog department superintendent.

Members of the family and firemen were unable to carry out any of the contents when a whipping gale lashed flames throughout and around the structure. No one was injured.

During the day, Central station firemen were called to the home of L. Kirkpatrick, 226 North Bowman street, when a broken furnace coil caused an alarm. They were summoned to the Jack Brandt home, 509 South Main

Editors Attack 'Funneling' Of Government News

WASHINGTON —(NS)— Funnelling of government news through one source—the Office of War Information—was under severe criticism today.

This policy was attacked by Roy A. Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, who said during a radio forum that the American people want facts, not propaganda.

"I am not challenging the good faith or the patriotic efforts of Elmer Davis of the OWI," Roberts said, "but there is a mighty close line between facts and propaganda.

"Whatever we may do about the propaganda abroad, the American people have a right to demand and the American news-

Sees Eventual Nazi Defeat In N. Africa

But Correspondent Warns of Trials Ahead for Yanks, British.

(Editor's Note: War Correspondent Edward W. Beattie has just returned to Allied North African headquarters from a 10-day tour of the Tunisian front. Now, against his background of reporting the Italian invasion of Ethiopia, and the German invasions of Czechoslovakia, Poland and France, he evaluates the position of the Allies and the enemy in Africa, as the zero hour for the Allied big push nears.)

By EWDARD W. BEATTIE
(U.P. Staff Correspondent)

ALLIED NORTH AFRICAN HEADQUARTERS—Commanders, intelligence officers, sergeants and privates—American, British and French—know the Germans and Italians are beaten in North Africa, but that it is going to be hard to convince them of the fact.

Once the Allied machine starts rolling, the Germans, with what help they can get from the Italians and a few conscripts from stonge states, will never be able to stop it.

The Germans and Italians are in North Africa to gain time for Adolf Hitler, while he tries to plug the cracks appearing in his continental system.

Barring successes that nobody on the Allied side of the front can visualize, the Axis cannot hope for better than a bitter, defensive battle, ending either in a desperate effort to evacuate a portion of the best German troops, or, more probably, a last-ditch stand at various strong points along the coast.

There are a total of 170,000 Axis fighting men in Africa, including the air force. Well over half are Germans, and they are strong

HITS OVERTIME

Rickenbacker Favors 40-Hour Week at Regular Rate.

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker is opposed to overtime pay for the 48-hour work week recently ordered by President Roosevelt.

"Everybody should be ready to work 48 hours a week for the high hourly wages they get now, if for no other reason than to save their own skins," declared the first World war ace in an interview.

"In times like this," he continued, "I do not approve of overtime pay except for the men in the foxholes, the swamp, the desert — those making the supreme sacrifice."

Rickenbacker asserted, "I see no end of the war until the fall of 1944 and it may last longer."

COLUMBUS—(NS)—Suspecting that a fire at the Power Battery company early today was of incendiary origin, firemen turned over a report to the FBI. The firm manufactures batteries for army trucks.

100 TO LEAVE FOR SERVICE

3 Selective Service Boards Send Men to Training Camps During Week.

More than 100 men will leave for military service from Richland county's three selective service boards within the next three days, draft officials said today. Largest of the groups is that which will entrain on the Erie from Board three Thursday noon.

The departing delegations will be feted at a party in the Legion home tonight. Only presentation of gifts from civic organizations will mark their leaving on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, according to Earl Saltzgaber, chairman of the Richland county civic victory committee that arranges for "send-off" parties.

Charles M. Walter, West Second street, will be acting corporal in charge of a small group which will leave from Board one at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow. The group will assemble shortly before this hour at the Erie station. Herman M. Gross, Mansfield R. D. 4, will be acting corporal in charge of another small group from Board two which will meet at the board headquarters at 9 a. m. Wednesday. Notices mailed to the men announced the starting time as 8 a. m., but board officials said the hour had been changed until 9 a. m. Another smaller group will leave from Board two later in the day.

Board three's large group, which will assemble at 11:30 a. m. Thursday in draft headquarters before leaving on the Erie at 12:30 p. m., will be in charge of Acting Corp. Ted Echelberger, Mansfield R. D. 5.

Risto Ryti Re-elected By Unanimous Vote.

HELSINKI —(AP)— President Risto Ryti was re-elected to head the government of warring Finland by a practically unanimous vote today.

The decision was made in an election with puzzled factors, including the tentative projection of the name of Field Marshal Baron Karl Gustav Mannerheim, commander in chief of Finland's armed forces, as a candidate without his sanction.

(The Finnish high command reported in a communique broadcast by the Berlin radio that a flight of 10 Russian planes had dropped bombs in the vicinity of Helsinki without causing any damage. It described aerial activity over the Gulf of Finland as "extremely lively.")

Richelieu, Famous French Battleship, Docks In N. Y.

By JOSEPH MORTON

NEW YORK —(AP)— The 35,000-ton French battleship Richelieu, crippled but still far from impotent, slid into New York harbor last Thursday after dodging a pack of submarines in mid-Atlantic and riding out the toughest gale many of her crew ever had experienced.

The 7,600-ton French cruiser Montcalm, a 6-inch gun vessel which, like the Richelieu, had been based at the West African port of Dakar, made most of the Atlantic crossing with the battleship and berthed at Philadelphia. The two parted company twa and a half days out.

Several French destroyers, which went to an undisclosed eastern port, also came across with the Richelieu and Montcalm.

At a press conference announcing the arrival, Vice Admiral V. B. Raymond A. Fenard, chief of a French naval mission to the United States, issued a statement which said:

"For the first time since 1929, there arrived a few days ago in certain eastern ports a most important contingent of French war vessels under the orders of General Giraud, including a battleship, a cruiser, and several destroyers, which are to undergo necessary repairs in different navy yards where they will be cordially

POLL SHOWING CITY AGAINST TIME CHANGE

Overwhelming Support For Retaining War Time Shown In First Ballots.

RURAL 'VOTE' OPPOSES

Response From 120 Reveals Rural Areas 3 to 1 in Favor of 'Slow' Time.

Mansfield favors retaining war time by an overwhelming majority, on the basis of returns in the News-Journal poll, while the first ballots received from rural areas near the city give the change to "slow" time a three-to-one margin.

Opinions expressed throughout the state on the time change bill have been in about the same ratio with the cities asking that war time be retained and the farm sections favoring a return to eastern standard time.

In the News-Journal poll, Mansfielders today had voted 110 for retaining war time and 10 to change to "slow" time.

The rising tide of opposition to the time change bill passed recently by the Ohio legislature was reaching Gov. John W. Bricker today. He said previously that he would sign the bill because the legislature passed it by such an overwhelming vote.

In Galion, an open letter and petitions will be submitted to city council Tuesday night, asking that the city remain on war time.

Robert B. Wiseman, one of the opponents of the time change, will turn a letter over to council in which he will point out that confusion will result if the railroads and postoffice continue on war time and the rest of the city changes to "slow" time, adding that war time will give workers an extra hour in the spring and

Army Officers Refuse to Give Men Leave From Duties To Help Out With Crops.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The army has flatly rejected the appeals of farm state congressmen to furlough skilled farm workers during the planting and harvesting of crops, it was learned today.

High-ranking army officials have told the senate military affairs committee, now investigating manpower, that it is "utterly impossible" to check men in the army, select those who would be valuable in the growing of foodstuffs, and dispatch them to farms.

The military spokesmen have talked favorably, however, of a plan for the permanent discharge

Red Cross Sounds Urgent Appeal To Fill Blood Quota

With only two dys remaining before the Cleveland blood donor mobile unit rolls into Mansfield for its regular monthly two-day visit the Richland county blood donor committee today issued an urgent call to volunteers to return their appointment cards immediately.

Although the Thursday schedule is filled, at least 70 more appointments must be slated for Friday to meet the county quota of 3.0 pints for February. Unless these appointments are set up within the next 24 hours the mobile unit may return to Cleveland minus the quota of life-saving fluid for the country's armed forces.

More than 100 of the 500 appointment cards mailed by the blood donor committee have not been returned and it is necessary that the committee have these cards by Tuesday to complete the Friday donation schedule. Volunteers are requested to notify the committee even though they find it necessary to cancel their appointments.

The mobile unit will be stationed as usual at Bethany House of First Presbyterian church and will operate Thursday from 1:45 p. m. to 3:45 p. m., and again Friday between the hours of 10:45 a. m., to 2:45 p. m.

All but a few donors scheduled for February are new to the service. The only previous volunteers receiving notification were those who served in September.

HEAR FISHER

Ohio Senate Group to Consider Liquor Shortage Tonight.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Don Fisher, acting state liquor director, is expected to outline before the senate liquor control committee tonight the why and wherefore of Ohio's dearth of domestic whiskeys.

Fisher indicated he would submit a prepared statement at the committee hearing which was called to consider a resolution by Senator Frank S. Day (D., Cuyahoga) seeking an investigation of the liquor shortage by a joint legislative committee.

Fisher contends that Ohio receives treatment at least as favorable as that accorded other states by distillers, who are rationing whiskey reserves.

Ohio has about 200,000 cases of liquor on order for February delivery, but Fisher said in the face of the wartime demand "we probably could sell twice that amount."

German Armor Repulses U. S. Troops at Pass

Russian Tanks At Outskirts, 5 Columns Close In.

By HENRY SHAPIRO

MOSCOW—(U.P.)—The battle for Kharkov neared a climax today with a fierce tank battle raging at the city's outskirts and troop trains evacuating the German garrison threatened by five advancing Red army columns.

(Some competent military observers in London expected the fall of Kharkov to be announced by the Red army in the late night special communique.)

Swinging for a knockout blow, Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's armored and infantry forces were reported closing in swiftly on Kharkov, industrial capital of the Ukraine and the most important German base east of the Dniper.

The capture of Rostov on the Don and Voroshilovgrad in the Donets basin, the Red army's biggest twin victory of the war, and knocked two of the main props out from under the tottering German defenses, and a third smashing victory at Kharkov appeared in the making.

The Nazi command threw strong armored and motorized forces, including Elite SS units, into desperate counter-blows before Kharkov. But in the light of the reported mass evacuation of the city, their efforts shaped up as probable rear guard fighting to cover the retreat.

As the Russians tightened their grip on the three-quarters encircled stronghold, the heaviest battle was reported only seven miles southeast of the city proper in the area of Rogan. In three days of fighting on that front,

American Anchor Farther South Imperilled By Nazis.

By DANIEL DE LUCE

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(AP) — German armor believed to be from the forces of Marshal Rommel has smashed against American positions west of Faid pass for a 20-mile break-through, endangering the U. S. anchor at Gafsa, farther south, it was disclosed here today.

Overwhelming American artillery positions guarding the westward exit of Faid pass, German tanks, possibly 50 in number, branched out to the northwest and southwest after the initial attack at 7 a. m. yesterday, spokesmen said.

Gafsa, a rail town 60 miles southwest of the Faid pass area, was reported in danger of being cut off by a spearhead of a Nazi division. Sources here said it was assumed that Gafsa might soon be evacuated.

The Allied headquarters communique announced that "the enemy launched attacks by tanks, infantry and artillery, supported by dive-bombers" in the Faid area.

"Heavy fighting took place and is continuing," it said.

(A Reuters dispatch to London said one of the German columns was moving from Faid pass toward Sbeitla, which lies in a gap in the mountains 40 miles to the northwest, and the other westward from the hills north of Sened toward the Gafsa-Sidi Bouzid road. The correspondent added, however, that the Allies had the situation under control.)

STRONGER: Japs Bolstering Remaining Solomons Holdings

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Stiffening Japanese resistance in the Shortland island area of the Solomons indicated today that the enemy is moving in reinforcements in an effort to check America's anticipated offensive in that direction.

This development was reflected in the navy communique which stated that 45 Jap Zero fighter planes intercepted American aircraft which attempted to raid the important Shortland island area in the northern Solomons on Feb. 13.

Although eight of the enemy planes were shot down, America's south Pacific air force paid heavily for the assault. Four U. S. planes were shot down by Zeros and two more by anti-aircraft fire which was described as "heavy."

This is the largest number of Zeros ever mentioned in navy communiques on an intercepting mission since the outbreak of the Solomons conflict.

During the past few weeks American airmen have made numerous sweeps over the Shortland-Bougainville area but in most of the raids there was little or no Japanese aerial resistance.

Since the crushing of Nipponese resistance on Guadalcanal, navy men have been predicting that the Japanese would bolster their defenses in the northern Solomons to prevent an American sweep northwestward toward the main enemy bases near Truk.

The navy failed to disclose

DOUBLE TARGET: British Bombers Blast Cologne, Milan

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Royal Air Force squadrons, bombing Germany and Italy in a double-barreled assault, attacked the Rhineland city of Cologne and the Italian arsenal city of Milan last night, it was announced today.

Both attacks were described as "large scale" operations and 11 British bombers failed to return. The Cologne raid was concentrated and a "great weight" of high explosives was rained on the city in a half hour, authorities said. Defenses of the oft-bombed Rhineland city were reported less active than usual.

Milan also was subjected to a concentrated attack and large fires were started in the city's industrial section where war industries and transport facilities are centered, it was reported. Italian defenses also were described as weak.

An Italian communique said the attack on Milan was carried out by several waves of planes. The Rome broadcast reported heavy damage and at least 16 dead and 221 injured.

From a British coastal town accustomed to the sound of large flights of heavy planes, one resident reported that the sky fleet heard flying toward the continent at dusk last night made a noise "louder than anything of the kind I have ever heard."

"Planes were streaming over for about an hour," he said.

Reports from Geneva said that heavy explosions were heard from street, last night, when an overheated furnace caused an alarm.

Ashland city firemen were unable to save the Trinity Evangelical church structure six miles east of Ashland on Route 89 which burned at 9 a. m. yesterday just before Rev. E. L. Zachmann was to conduct services. Frank Kime, janitor, had fired the furnace early in the morning but was absent when the pastor discovered the ceiling aflame.

The "White Church" was a landmark in Ashland county and for many years had been considered one of the most beautiful country churches in Ohio. The structure was built in 1869, a new roof was installed a year ago and new carpeting laid in the interior recently. The congregation celebrated the church's centennial anniversary in 1932.

In Ohio the lowest temperature recording of the week-end was seven below zero at Youngstown. Dayton and Akron reported two below, Toledo one above and Cincinnati five above.

At Cleveland, police reported that Robert Mahoney, 44, an Erie railroad watchman, was frozen to death yesterday, while Columbiana county authorities said Martin Harrigan, 69, was found frozen to death on a highway near Leetonia.

Snow and wind Saturday night ushered in Mansfield's cold wave, with street department employes engaged throughout Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night in spreading salt and cinders at danger spots while County Engineer Howard Sword kept crews busy through the same period on county highways. Conditions were worst in the northern section of Richland county, Sword reported.

Many Mansfielders suffered from cold last night when a bus en route from Newark was stranded one hour by a frozen fuel line two miles north of Bellville.

State highway department snow plows were busy during the storm in many sections of Ohio and Highway Director Hal G. summer to grow "victory" gardens.

County Agent George B. Ganyard said today that he had heard only opposition to War time expressed in the county's rural districts, farmers pointing out that in the summer the dew keeps them out of the fields until almost noon and war time makes it difficult for them to employ city residents who may want to work afternoon shifts in war plants.

News-Journal poll results included comment from one farmer who said he didn't believe that all farmers were against war time and added that "a lot of this time change agitation is politics, pure and simple."

In a few cases city residents said they preferred to have war time during the summer and "slow" time in winter. One farm family wanted to go back to central standard time, two hours slower than war time.

Meanwhile, Michigan switched back to standard time at 2 a. m. today under a law recently enacted by the legislature, but because Detroit and other eastern Michigan industrial areas refused to turn back their clocks, there was widespread confusion, press dispatches said.

At least a dozen communities in the vital war area of eastern Michigan kept their clocks on war time, Detroit citizens went to the polls today to express their preference on the time question while Donald M Nelson, WPB chairman, advised them that "grave losses" would beset the war program if Detroit should decide to turn its clocks back an hour.

Although the council was not bound by results of today's balloting, the voters were expected to approve retention of eastern war time. The highly industralized triangle of Detroit, Port Huron and Bay City have led the fight against the legislature's action returning Michigan to the central time zone.

Soviet forces smashed 62 German tanks.

Field dispatches reported significant gains by the Soviet spearhead drilling in against Kharkov from the region of Zolochev, 25 miles northwest of the city.

Remnants of the Rostov garrison were reported fleeing westward along the Sea of Azov coast in a race against Soviet forces striking southward from the Donets basin and threatening to cut the German line of retreat.

The Russian high command announced in its mid-day communique that Red armies had occupied a number of localities southwest of Voroshilovgrad, 27 miles southwest of Voroshilvgrad, where they were driving southward toward the Sea of Azov to trap the remains of Hitler's Rostov garrison. Nearly a battalion of German infantry—normally 1,000 men—was wiped out in fierce fighting.

(Unofficial reports from Stockholm said the Russians had broken into Stalino, great industrial town northwest of Rostov and only 65 miles north of the Sea of Azov, and were battling the Germans in the streets.)

The whole German line in the Donets basin northeast of Rostov appeared to be crumbling following the capture of Rostov, Russia's fourth largest city and gateway to the Caucasus; Krasny-Sulin, 49 miles to the north, and Voroshilovgrad, industrial capital of the Donets valley nearly 100 miles north of Rostov.

The only avenue of escape for the German forces in the Donets valley, estimated at upwards of 250,000 men, apart from secondary roads, was a single-track, circuitous railroad that winds from Rostov, through Taganrog to Stalino and thence to a branch line of the Dniepropetrovsk-Sevastopol line.

Field dispatches said the Russians already were advancing on Taganrog, 35 miles west of Rostov, as part of a general advance all along the eastern end of the Donets pocket.

Rostov itself was a burned and blasted city strewn with the corpses of German dead, back in Russian hands for the second time. Many of its buildings were still in flames, set afire by Soviet shelling or by German demolition units.

Reports Hitler Gives Up Army Command

LONDON —(U.P.)— The Evening Standard reported in a Berne dispatch today that Adolf Hitler was relinquishing supreme command of the German armies and turning the post over to Field Marshal Fritz von Mannstein.

There was no confirmation of the report here, but observers said, "we would not be surprised if this happens or that it had already happened."

The mounting German disaster in Russia apparently had caused dissension of some sort in the Nazi high command. Military observers believed Hitler might be forced to give up the direction of strategy on the eastern front. They said indications were that the German general staff had decided on a new defense line based on Riga, Kiev and Odessa. That line would be roughly 280 miles west of Kharkov.

COLD DOES SOME GOOD, ANYWAY

Frigid Spell Halts Break-up Of Roads, Says Sours.

COLUMBUS—(UP)—Every cloud has a silver lining—even those which brought zero temperatures to most of Ohio.

State Highway Director Hal G. Sours said today that the cold spell was welcomed by the highway department since it slowed the breaking up process which recent open weather had started in Ohio highways.

He said highways deteriorate little during extremely cold weather.

received and treated just like all other United Nations ships.

"They are of the most modern types and consitute a valuable addition to the force of the United Nations.

"The crews are glad to be in the United States, where most of them are visiting for the first time, and they have their hearts set on speeding up the refitting of their ships.

"After more than two years of enforced inaction, they are anxious to take up the fight once again against our common enemy. They will soon join their comrades of the French navy who have since last December taken their places with the British and American navies and are doing their share in keeping open the sea lanes to the North African front."

Censorship permitted the disclosure today of their arrival.

The Richelieu had lain at anchor at Dakar for more than two years. Naval officials permitted me to make the 3,700-mile trip from Africa with her "just in case anything should happen."

United States destroyers escorted us all the way, safeguarding against an attempt by Germany and Italy to sink such a prize while she was able to move only at slow speed.

The men aboard were excited and happy as the Statue of Liberty broke through a heavy fog at Journey's End.

"Our coming will show the American people that France still has a navy," Capt. Marcel Deramond told me. "It will show them, too, that our sailors are anxious and eager to fight."

The Richelieu is one of the world's most powerful battleships and the transfer to the United States conclusively ends the one-time fear of Washington and London that she might fall into Axis hands

Armor plating of the Richelieu is strong enough to withstand a direct hit by a 16 inch shell directly above one of her magazines. Her main batteries are eight 15-inch guns.

Measuring 815 feet from stem to stern, she is equipped to carry four planes and has a normal complement of 1,460 men. The battleship can attain a top speed of 32 knots.

of whole units now in training for work in areas which have reported acute shortages of manpower. But no distinction would be made between trained farm workers or those in other occupations.

The disclosure of the army's rigid stand on manpower came as congressional leaders promised vigorous opposition to the war manpower commisison's cancellation of dependency as a ground for draft deferment.

Sen. Warren R. Austin, R., Vt., author of a compulsory service bill, said the WMC's efforts to solve manpower problems without congressional action were doomed to failure. Chairman Andrew J. May., D., Ky., of the house military affairs committee said his group would report favorably on Wednesday a bill to postpone drafting married men with children in each state until all single men and married men without children have been called.

May said his committee would act regardless of week-end statements of WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt and Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey that all able-bodied men aged 18 through 37 would be in the armed forces by the end of the year unless they were in essential war jobs.

Meanwhile, Senate Republican Leader Charles L. McNary of Oregon appealed for action to forestall a disastrous slump in foodstuff production.

He said that in his opinion some skilled workers could be shifted from army camps to farm fields without endangering the country's offensive or defensive power "in the slightest degree." He protested against what he described as the disruption of production on vital home fronts by denying them sufficient labor to keep supplies of food and materials flowing to the fighting forces.

Earlier this month a formation of Flying Fortresses was intercepted in the Shortland area and surprisingly three of the powerful four-motored bombers were shot down at that time.

U. S. Planes Batter Japs In Burma

BOMBAY —(AP)— Fighters and bombers of the Tenth American air force have carried out a series of destructive raids against Japanese installations and rolling stock in Burma the past two days, destroying or damaging an estimated 140 freight cars and leaving fires blazing among enemy barracks and storage dumps, an official communique reported tiday.

The two-day assault was climaxed yesterday when a large formation of American fighters armed with light explosive and fragmentation bombs attacked the advanced Japanese headquarters at Maingkwan and destroyed its barracks.

Not a plane was reported lost.

Rabaul Undergoes Heaviest Attack

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA—(INS)—Rabaul, Japan's largest base in the southwest Pacific north of Australia, still smouldered today from the effects of the greatest Allied aerial bombardment in this war theater.

Vast areas of the New Britain island base were laid waste when 30 heavy Allied bombers battered it unmercifully.

Flying Fortress and Liberator bombers, sweeping over the big Japanese base in four mighty waves just before dawn yesterday, dropped more than 50 tons of explosives, hundreds of fragmentation bombs and nearly 4,000 incendiaries on defense installations and the city itself.

Pillars of smoke rose to a height of 7,500 feet and flames could be seen 110 miles away, Lieut. Gen. George C Kenney's airmen reported.

Dramatically carrying out Gen. Kenney's promise to "hit the Japs so long as we've got an airplane, and hit them hard," the heavy bomber units swept into Rabaul in a series of coordinated blows that smashed at the vitals of the enemy's important supply depot.

The bombers ranged in and out of towering pillars of flames to let go medium and high explosive bombs on installations and buildings, fragmentation bombs on Jap personnel and fire bombs on the huge concentrations of enemy stores.

A Report to the Nation

..on the Beverage Distilling Industry's Part in the War Effort... and the current Question of Rationing

by H.V. Kaltenborn NOTED COMMENTATOR AND JOURNALIST

IN RECENT MONTHS I have received a number of letters from my radio and movie audience asking me this question ..."Will our distilleries continue to produce alcoholic beverages during the war?"

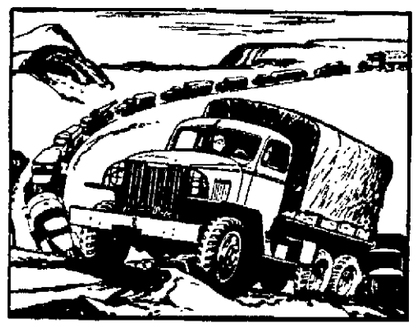
Frankly, I did not know the answer. I investigated and here is what I found out. No distiller is making whiskey today. The beverage distilling industry is engaged 100% in producing war alcohol for the government.

As a matter of fact, I discovered that individually and collectively the beverage distilling industry offered its facilities to the government one year before Pearl Harbor.

Here's another interesting point. While distillers have substantial stocks on hand, made during peacetime ..enough to last three years... they have, in fairness to all, self-imposed a system of rationing. This will assure anyone interested in purchasing these products that a reasonable amount will be available over a period of time.

During my investigation I also learned the answers to several other questions. I am telling you about them below.

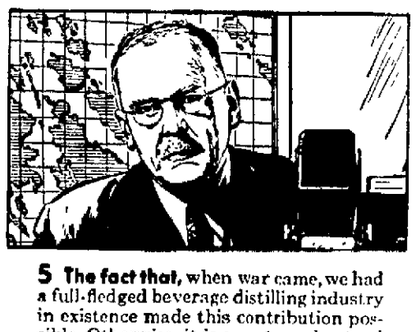
1 Alcohol is vital to war production because it is a basic ingredient used in the manufacture of smokeless powder, chemical warfare materials, medical supplies, and synthetic rubber. The government's 1943 quota calls for 530,000,000 gallons, half of which is supplied by the beverage distilling industry.



2 The industry's facilities for the production of grain alcohol make it possible to include 200,000 tons of rubber from grain in the government's 870,000-ton synthetic rubber program. In producing war alcohol the industry uses grain exclusively (no sugar). Sugar is never used in making whiskey, either.

3 This use of grain will not deplete the stores needed for food as there is a tremendous surplus on hand. The distilling industry is transforming 100,000,000 bushels of it into vital war material, enabling farmers to contribute even more directly to the war effort and freeing much needed granary space.

4 Although 100% converted for war alcohol, the industry will still be able to supply alcoholic beverages to the public from reserve stocks made during peacetime and thus continue to account for more than a billion dollars in taxes every year for the federal and state governments.



5 The fact that, when war came, we had a full-fledged beverage distilling industry in existence made this contribution possible. Otherwise, it is easy to understand how the government would have been forced to spend months of time and millions of dollars in building and renovating distilleries and training personnel.

H.V. Kaltenborn

When sometimes you may be unable to obtain your favorite brand... please remember...

1 No distiller is making whiskey today.
2 Every distiller is using his plant 100% to produce war alcohol for the government.
3 This alcohol is necessary for smokeless powder, chemical warfare materials, medical supplies, and synthetic rubber.
4 The supply of alcoholic beverages in storage must be made to last longer than originally planned.
5 Therefore—in fairness to all—rationing has been self-imposed to assure a reasonable supply over a period of time.

CLUB WOMEN HAVE EMBLEM BREAKFAST

Business and Professional Women Hear Interesting Talk By Mrs. John Horst At Program In Colonial Room Sunday Morning.

MRS. JOHN HORST, wife of the physician and surgeon at Ohio State Reformatory, was guest speaker at the annual Emblem breakfast for members of the Business and Professional Women's club Sunday morning in the Colonial room on Park avenue west. She told her audience many interesting experiences encountered while she and Dr. Horst were stationed in Siam as medical missionaries.

Devotions at the meeting were in charge of Miss Mary Lou Eyster, the topic being, "Love With Intelligence and Sympathy." Miss Dorothy Landers, president, was in charge of the affair, and made a plea for blood donors for the Red Cross, and requested members to participate in the Victory Book drive. She also urged the members to contribute to the forthcoming Red Cross drive.

Miss Margaret Hopper interpreted the club emblem, following which Mrs. Mildred Perry, membership chairman, conducted initiation services for four new members. They are Miss Lois Addelsperger, Mrs. Alice Haire, Mrs. Marie Hildreth and Miss Wilma Blaney. The members took part in group singing and reports were made by the secretary, treasurer and committee chairmen. Miss Hopper served as program chairman.

The next affair for the club will be the annual glee club tea on Sunday, March 7, at First Presbyterian church, with Mrs. Falsom Teeter making arrangements. Plans also were discussed at Sunday's meeting for the club's birthday party being planned for March 17 at the Mansfield-Leland hotel. This affair will be a 7 o'clock dinner, and it was stated today that members may attend in either formal or informal attire.

Dinner Party In Bellville Sunday Honors Soldier

Sgt. Philip G. Hill, 109 West Second street, who left today for his basic training in the ordnance department at Santa Anita, Cal., was feted Sunday evening when his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Hill, were hosts for a dinner party at their home in Bellville.

Sgt. Hill enlisted in the army on Nov. 9 and received his orders to report during the past week.

Fifteen guests were present for the dinner, which also marked the birthday anniversary of his sister, Mrs. Richard J. Gore of Lexington.

Last Wednesday evening 35 relatives of Sgt. Hill attended a covered-dish dinner in his honor at North Lake park pavilion. He received many gifts from the guests. His wife, and his father-in-law, Vance Dean, and his parents accompanied him to Columbus today where he reported at Ft. Hayes.

Study Club Has Patriotic Theme

Patriotism is the outstanding theme being chosen for club gatherings and the Mansfield Garden Study club chose "Victory Gardens" for its topic, presented by Mrs. Clarence Lisle when the club met recently at the Women's Club, with Mrs. E. C. Jenkins as hostess.

Fourteen members gathered for a salad luncheon, which was served at a table decorated with red tapers and a bowl of red and white flowers for a centerpiece.

During the business session, the group decided to participate in the Victory Book campaign. Attractive year programs, made by various members, were distributed to the group.

Mrs. Lisle read her informative paper on the program that is advocated by the government. She told of desirable plans for planting and the most important vegetables to be planted in the Victory gardens. The time for planting was also discussed in the paper.

Mrs. L. D. Bower conducted the question box. During this period, valuable garden information was given to each member. The March 12 meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. H. D. Bishop.

GUEST SPEAKER.

Prof. L. Hardy of the department of mathematics at Ohio State university, has been announced as the guest speaker at the next meeting of the Prospect School Parent-Teacher association scheduld for March 8 in the school annex. The meeting will be in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Zearl Shriner committee chairmen.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, Feb. 16.

The stellar influences operating on this day make for much excitement and gratifying and progressive conditions. A surprising turn of events may demand keen judgment and quick action. However, jumping at conclusions would prove devastating. The element of romance, adventure and dramatic incident is conspicuous. Be alert to accidents.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a lively and progressive year. Sudden openings for progress call for quick grasp of unusual situations, although overacting, or impulsive moves might prove disastrous to cherished objectives.

A child born on this day may have many cultural intellectual and artistic abilities, promising an interesting professional career. It may be inclined to overdo or to act impulsively.

AMATEURS GARDENERS INVITED TO CENTER

Literature On Planting and Cultivation of Victory Gardens Available At Library, According to Garden Center Secretary.

DESPITE SUB-ZERO temperatures and chill wintry weather the thoughts of many Mansfield people are turning toward spring and plans for victory gardens. With the advent of stricter rationing programs the government is urging everyone with available space to plant a victory garden this year, and the Mansfield Garden Center is cooperating one hundred per cent with the government's request by providing all types of literature and advice to beginners.

Mrs. W. L. Gross, secretary of the center, stated today that although the Center is open every day on the second floor of the Mansfield Public library many people have been led to believe that information in regards to the planing of gardens may be secured only on Tuesdays and Thursdays, when club members are in charge.

The Garden Center which is composed of ten Garden clubs in the city is extending a special invitation to amateur gardeners or anyone seeink information on the planting and cultivation of gardens to visit the Center any weekday.

Members of the Royal Regal Garden club will be in charge of the Center during the month of February.

The governing board of the Center is comprised of two representatives of each of the ten Mansfield garden clubs, with Mrs. George Holland serving as president; Mrs. Gross, secretary, and Mrs. Henry Paulsen, program chairman.

Mrs. Gross stated that the Center is working in cooperation with the Richland county Conservation office, and among the many services being offered by the Center are estimates on the amount of food which can be grown on various size lots, and how much should be derived from the garden for canning purposes.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Shall I go to the door?" I asked.

"No, I think I would better go," my father said. "He may need to have his suspicions allayed."

With a badge concealed in his hand, he opened the door to the length of the night chain.

"Good afternoon," he said, and a deep masculine voice asked. "Is this the Graham apartment?"

"Yes, it is. May I ask your name?"

"I am John Gardner, of the —— bank. A few minutes ago I received a rather curious message asking me to come here."

The tone expressed doubt, but my father had undone the chain and was holding out his hand.

"Please come right in, Mr. Gardner," he said cordially. "I am the one who asked that you be sent for. My name is Charles Spencer and here is something better than a calling card."

Spencer Shows Badge.

He held out the badge, and Mr. Gardner nodded with an air of relief.

"Margaret," my father said, "may I present Mr. Gardner? My daughter, Mrs. Graham, Mr. Gardner."

The bank official bowed, and I responded, then my father set a chair for him and proceeded briskly.

"I understand that you know the real identity of the customer of your bank who gave you the name of Georges Minot?" he began.

"Yes, I do," the banker said. "The message which brought me here was from him. We have been worrying about him. Of course we can imagine what has been happening over in his country, and it was rumored, you know, that he was dead. But in the last two weeks he has telephoned us, and we are very anxious to get in touch with him. The messenger said that he was in danger."

"He has been," my father said, "in deadly danger. He has been going about disguised as an old man, with a heavy white beard and wig, but he had those removed today, and he will not appear outside again until the people menacing him have been dealt with effectively. I shall take him to a safe hiding place tonight and will keep him there until all danger is past."

"He is here in the hotel?" the bank official asked.

"He is in the next room," my father said. "If you will excuse me, I will call him in, then we can tell you a surprising story and plan what can be done."

He went into the bedroom and soon reappeared, ushering in Georges and Halloran.

Gardner went at once to Georges.

"You don't know how relieved I am to see you safe and sound," the banker said with sincere emphasis, as the two shook hands cordially. "We have been mighty anxious about you."

"I've been anxious about myself," Georges answered with the laugh that shows how his high spirits triumph over gloom and peril. He is so much like Mary in that respect, that I have wondered whether he might not be a more fitting mate for Mary than Noel. Yet I know that Mary and Georges coupled together would be something like two meteors whirling off into space. They both need balance wheels. Noel was a good one for Mary, and I told myself that Olina would be able to take care of Georges.

"Sit down, all of you, please," my father said, then introduced Halloran and said impressively:

"Mr. Halloran has an extremely interesting story to tell you, Mr. Gardner, and then we must plan what is best to be done."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T OFFER OPTIONS

Many tine players, who believe thoroughly in pre-emptive bids to open the auction, as a means of shutting out probably strong opponents, will seldom make high pre-emptive overcalls after an opponent has opened. The reason is two-fold. When you open with a high call, you may make it impossible for either opponent to dare to show a suit of only fair length, and hence your bid has a good chance to achieve its purpose. But, if one opponent has already shown his suit, your high bid only gives his side an option. If his partner fits that first suit, then his side can decide between making a contract of its own or doubling yours.

	♠ 6 5 3 ♥ 10 6 5 ♦ K Q J ♣ A Q 10 7
♠ Q J 10 4 ♥ K 9 ♦ 10 7 6 4 ♣ 9 5 2	N W E S	♠ K 8 ♥ 7 3 2 ♦ 9 8 5 3 2 ♣ K J 3
	♠ A 9 7 2 ♥ A Q J 8 4 ♦ A ♣ 8 6 4

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣
Pass	2 ♠	Pass	4 ♥

That was set two tricks worth 500 points to East and West, or more than their not-vulnerable game would have been worth. West took his spade K, shifted to the club J, and three tricks were taken in that suit. If West had been allowed to play the hand at 4-Spades, a somewhat similar defense would have held him to exactly his contract, with the heart K led, then a diamond to the A and a repeat of that suit for a ruff. West then would have had to guess the clubs correctly, which he should have done.

But the point of the deal is this — if North had been the dealer and had opened with 1-Hearts, it would have been impossible for East and West to find out about their spade fit except by unsoundly dangerous bidding. A secondary point is that South thought his partner was about a playing trick stronger, when he made that jump overcall while vulnerable, and hence he reckoned his diamond A, plus his couple of trumps with a singleton in the hostile bid suit, would enable his side to make 3-odd. Maybe he should not have reckoned that way, but the fact is that he did, and that his partner's bid risked being interpreted in just that way.

Tomorrow's Problem.

	♠ J ♥ 9 6 2 ♦ Q 10 3 ♣ Q 9 6 4 3 2
♠ None ♥ A K Q J 5 ♦ K 9 7 2 ♣ J 10 7 5	N W E S	♠ Q 9 7 6 3 ♥ 10 8 7 4 3 ♦ 6 5 ♣ 8
	♠ A K 10 8 5 4 2 ♥ None ♦ A J 8 4 ♣ A K

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

What is the correct play of this hand by South for 4-Hearts, in a rubber game, after West leads the spade Q?

For Dining Out

THAT NEW LOOK: Brown wool dress and jacket, pale blue taffeta revers. Sophie.

Gracie Allen's Home Alman(i)ac

Months ago, the shortage of fabric for clothes made itself felt here. Now there's even a shortage of felt. In fact, one of our most famous dressmakers had an oscillator put on her needle and has opened a tattooing parlor.

Don't be surprised if you should read a fashion note from Hollywood: "Miss Gloria de Oomph appeared at the premiere last night with a chic reproduction of the battleship U. S. S. Pennsylvania across her back and shoulders. Worthy of note was the amusing imitation smoke from the ship which was caught up into Miss de Oomph's snood."

We women have to be smart about clothes. Take your simple basic black dress. For daytime you can hang a dickey down the front and with a white cellophane belt, look like Kitty Foyle. Only be sure to get a lace dickey as men are always writing down the baseball scores on the celluloid ones.

Now for evening with the same black dress. First put some coq feathers in your hair. If they don't have any nice coqs at the butcher's, a Rhode Island Red will do. Now if you forget to button the top button of your dress and walk around with an expression on your face as though you were about to sneeze, people will think you're very sophisticated.

Advance fashion notes: The silhouettes for the new season will be the shoestring silhouette, the incinerator silhouette and the silhouette on the barroom floor. Necklines will be V-shaped, square shaped and kitty-cornered. The washed neck is also coming back into its own.

Most exciting news for the future is the new plastic dress. It's poured into a mould of some prominent movie star's figure. The idea is, when you go out at night, merely slip Dorothy Lamour's figure on over your own. Or maybe you would prefer Marlene Dietrich's or Gracie Allen's figure.

There are ordinarily about 105 male births for every 100 females.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS HAS VALENTINE TEA

Music Students Furnish Program for Sunday Afternoon Meeting; Mrs. Joseph Yeagle Assists Mrs. B. W. Knapp As Hostess.

A MUSICAL PROGRAM furnished the background of the meeting of the Review of Reviews club, when members met at the home of Mrs. B. W. Knap, 185 Bartley avenue, Sunday afternoon for a Valentine tea. Mrs. Joseph Yeagle, of Ashland assisted Mrs. Knapp.

A group of students from Mansfield Senior high school sang two numbers, one of which was "The Lord's Prayer." Girls participating were the Misses Barbara Tingley, Kay Kearn, Joanne Solomon, Nancy Twtichell and Ruth Beryman.

DAIRY FARM COSTS INCREASED 15 PER CENT OVER YEAR AGO

ITHACA — (INS) — Dairy farm production costs in New York State today are 15 per cent higher than a year ago, due to a large increase in farm wages and smaller increases in the prices of dairy rations, farm machinery, building materials and other commodities, according to Prof L. C Cunningham of the New York State College of Agriculture.

Dairy farm production costs, taken as a group, stand at 159 per cent of the 1910-14 level, and the highest since 1929. Cunningham said. Farm wages, with board, are up 30 per cent, at the highest farm wage level on record. Such farm wages reflect a tug-of-war between urban industry, with cost-plus contracts, and farms, which are at a disadvantage in bidding for labor under present levels of prices for farm products.

While farm wages are now at 230 per cent of pre-war, dairy ration prices are only 135 per cent of pre-war. The 1942 hay crop in New York for 1942 was 25 per cent more than the usual crop of the last 10 years, but rainy harvest weather has reduced its feeding value. A bumper crop of silage and grain corn has been harvested, though wet weather and shortage of workers made the job slow.

'GOOD' JAP INCREASE

GALLUP, N. M. — (INS) — "The number of 'good' Japs is increasing and when they are all good and dead, our boys can come home," wrote Capt. Franklin T. Green, recently awarded a silver star for gallantry in action, to his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. English of Gallup.

Committees to Deal With Ohio Food Problems

COLUMBUS — State and area committees to deal with food shortage problems will be organized by Roy F. Hendrickson, food distribution administration director, under an order signed by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard.

Describing the food shortages as "mainly the result of temporary maldistribution attributable to a variety of causes which must be identified and corrected," Wickard said all committees should include representation from both food retailer and general line food wholesale groups.

Publicly announced centers to investigate all complaints should be set up, Wickard said, adding that "meat should not be considered in short supply if a temporary beef shortage exists while pork, poultry, lamb, mutton, or other meat products are available."

Your Federal Income Tax

NO. 37: MEDICAL AND DENTAL EXPENSES

Under certain circumstances, expenses paid during the taxable year for medical care of the taxpayer, his wife, or a dependent of the taxpayer may be deducted. The term "medical care" includes amounts paid for the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease. It also includes payments for hospitalization insurance, for membership in an association furnishing co-operative or so-called free-choice medical service, or group hospitalization and clinical care. Payments of expenses for medical care are not under any circumstances allowable as deductions if the taxpayer was compensated for such expenses by insurance or otherwise.

The deduction for medical expenses is limited to the amount of such expenses as exceed 5 per cent of the net income which would be reported on line 19 of Form 1040 if no deduction for medical expenses were claimed. The maximum deduction in the case of a husband and wife who filed a joint return or a head of family may not exceed $2,500, and in the case of any other individuals, $1,250.

Assuming that a husband and wife filed a joint return on Form 1040 and their aggregate net income without deduction for medical care is $3,000, if the taxpayer had actually paid during the taxable year $500 for medical care of his family but had been compensated by insurance in the amount of $150, the taxpayer would be entitled to claim $200 as a deduction on line 17 of the return. It will be observed that the taxpayer made a net outlay for medical care of $350 ($500 less $150) and that 5 per cent of his net income before deduction for medical expenses is $150. Therefore, the difference between $350 and $150, or $200, is deductible.

He yearns for a word from home.

Writes Joe, in the P. S. department of a letter just received at this desk: "Have some of the fellows drop me a line. Thanks a lot!"

So all you guys who used to play baseball and softball, with Joe behind the bat, or played basketball in the city league with Joe tooting the whistle, get busy with the pen and ink.

Joe writes: "The going here is really tough! We have 87 instruments to fumble around with in the cockpit, and have to take a blindfold test and be able to put our hands on, or point out each and every one and tell what it's for.

"We are starting night flying this week, and then formation and some more instrument flying, on which I already have had several hours, and then some cross-country flights.

"We are flying a Vultee ship of 450 h.p., and believe you me it's a hot baby. It weighs two and a half tons, and when you cut the throttle it glides like a brick! So you see a fellow really has to stay on the ball.

"We land this ship at a speed of 90 m.p.h. Pretty fast for a Sunday driver, what?

"How's the sport situation on the home front? I see the Tygers dropped a hot one to Ashland the other evening. Tough luck, but those lads will find out later that a few battles won or lost on the old hardwood are a small item in their young lives.

"And if this battle that's going on overseas keeps up very long, they'll find it out in a hurry.

"How are Bob DeHaven and his Simpson Bulldogs coming along? He sure has done a fine job developing future Tygers, and deserves a lot of credit. I'd like to see some Class "A" school give him a chance. I'm sure they'd find a very capable man.

"Well, Rex, here's hoping that things are OK on the home front, and until I return, keep 'em posted!

Sincerely,
Joe Atton.

Cronin Predicts Scientific Game

BOSTON (INS) - Even if baseball players this year are not as spry as of yore the game will be played more scientifically because the deadened ball in the opinion of Red Sox Manager Joe Cronin today.

Cronin, newly returned from Red Cross duties in Hawaii said: "The second half of last season showed me very definitely that the ball was losing its liveliness.

"The new type of ball will be even less lively I suppose."

Cronin dismissed the notion that he'll play shortstop this summer in place of Johnny Pesky, now in the service.

Eddie Lake, acquired from the Cardinals chain, or Skeeter Newsome will fight for the shortstop post, Cronin said.

His playing role he continued will be limited to batting occasionally.

CHICAGO—(INS)—The Three-eye league, one of the oldest minor league circuits in organized baseball, was out of business today for the duration of the war.

Shortage of players and the increasing difficulties of transportation caused representatives of the six clubs meeting in Chicago to vote suspension of operations until the last shot is fired in the world conflict.

THE BOY·FROM MAINE

hey left the restaurant a few utes later, and Bailey said he ught he'd walk. They parted the sidewalk, and there was a ain ceremony about it on both s—Bailey said, "Thanks, old ı," and his eyes, that were ally so disinterested in what looked at, rested with friend- warmth on Hobey now, and his le flashed, and he shook Ho- s hand. "I am glad I called ," he said.

So am I. It was damn nice of "

'll phone you a bulletin later, l I?"

wish you would," said Ho- "And give my love to Rosa- when you talk to her."

Right. You bet I will. And " Bailey said, "be sure you o see her in a day or two. I n you'll be the first person ll want to see — you know ."

ey finally separated, these nities being over with . . . very clubby. Hobey thought onically, in the taxi driving All very generous and big- ted on both sides. And to m, he wondered suddenly, was three-nickel phone call? ehow he knew it hadn't been ll to Bailey's office; and now thought abruptly — after all friendliness — "Damn him, way. I never liked him and I r will."

e was allowed to see Rosalie days later: meanwhile no- had seen her except Bailey her mother. He found her in rge room full of flowers and with sunlight. She was sit- up in bed, propped against ws, wearing the first bed- et he had ever seen in his that didn't look old-ladyish— ad it looked like the smart little lace bolero of a rather superior evening dress. Her face was still pale, but her hair seemed more vivid than ever by contrast, and so did her rouged mouth, and her lashes and eyes.

"There's been a mistake," Hobey said. "If you're a mother, I'm . . ." He stopped, because it was one of those comparisons you couldn't finish.

"You're what?" Rosalie said.

"Skip it. Speechless, is what. All I'm trying to say is that you look about fourteen years old.

"Would you like to hear me talk like a mother?" Rosalie said. "Don't think I can't do it. This is beyond any question the most spectacular baby ever produced by anybody, anywhere—in fact he looks like me," she added, laughing at herself. "You go and see if you don't think he looks like me—in a nice, manly way, I mean. He's really a very manly baby, for one so young. The athletic type. Bailey says he has football shoulders. Go and see him," she said again. "Miss McGuire will take you."

Hobey went, and none of it was true, of course. Peter Harker didn't look like anything at all. Those were still the days when you could meet a newborn infant face to face—you didn't have to peer in at it through two inches of plate glass. The nurse held this one for Hobey's close inspection; a little bundle of blanket, with a submerged small face and sleepy slits of blue for eyes. Hobey touched its chin—or lack of chin—with an experimental forefinger. "Hello, fella," he said aloud, and then was sorry he had tried it. The nurse must have heard how his voice caught in his throat.

He went back and praised the child extravagantly to Rosalie, who said, "You think you don't really mean it—but you wait a few years. You'll see."

After that he paid a daily visit to the hospital, for the remaining week or more that Rosalie was there. He took her books and flowers and presents for the baby—as well as tidings of the world outside, which she seemed to welcome most of all. She said she felt as though she'd been out of circulation for a thousand years, and she demanded to be told what had been happening.

"For instance," she said once, "how's your little island protege?"

"Coming along like a breeze."

"I haven't asked you lately," Rosalie said. "She must be almost ready for sprunging on a waiting world—or isn't she?"

"Damn near."

He gave details, and as he talked he became enthusiastic, in spite of himself. Rosalie said, "I think you like this little girl," and he said, "No, I don't!" and it was true as it had always been. But one's entrepreneur's excitement had nothing to do with one's personal feelings. "You ought to hear Ruby on the subject," he told Rosalie. "We have alternate explosions of profanity and praise—and it goes on all the time. It's something to hear."

They had been making haste slowly with Bonnie—so sure in their conviction that she was going to be sensational, that they wanted to chip off all the rough corners before they presented her. Things like her diction, and her carriage and posture, as well as her taste in clothes—a dozen things like these were still being worked on and corrected.

Sid Spargo, Ruby's press agent, was doing as much advance promotion as was thought wise at this point. He had said at sight of Bonnie that it would be a cinch to put her over, when she looked like that; and he was proving right. She had a photogenic face, and photographers liked to highlight her cheekbones, and her shiny eyelids, and her sulky mouth; and they said, "Muss your hair a little, dear. No, just loosen it. That's it!" The results were startlingly effective, and picture editors were using them—as Spargo said—without a struggle. It didn't matter in the least that Bonnie hadn't made her debut yet. Broadway would know her when it saw her, by the time she did.

The effect of this whole program on Bonnie herself would have amused Hobey if it hadn't annoyed him. It was a little previous for prima donna temperament, but there were definite signs of this already. For one thing, Bonnie had quarreled with the management of her hotel; and moving out of what she alluded to scathingly as "that hen coop," had established herself in a theatrical hotel just off Times Square. Here she had even taken a little suite instead of a single room. "Who do you think's going to pay for this?" Hobey said when he saw it; and Bonnie replied serenely, "I am, as soon as I get working. I'm going to get myself a better place even than this.

"And anyway" she added, with that sly significant look he hated, "I'm not worying I don't ever need to worry—even if I don't work."

"You're lucky," Hobey said tersely. "What do you think you mean by that?"

But he knew very well what Bonnie thought she meant by that. Long ago now, during those first weeks after she arrived in New York, she had discovered his ashamed compunction about the island incident, and now she used it as a bond or as a weapon, whichever suited her.

Then everything happened to him—all within the next two months. The first thing was that Rosalie left Bailey. That was late in April. After all the years and all the waiting, it happened suddenly and simply, between one day and the next—it even happened, as such things do, at a time that seemed least likely. Rosalie had been so happy, and the baby was so new.

Then one day in the early afternoon she telephoned to Hobey and asked him to come over—she had something important to tell him. Her voice on the wire sounded strangely cold, as though he had offended her in some way; but when Hobey said, "My dear, what is it?" she said succinctly, "Bailey."

When he got there, she said at once, "We've had the most terrible quarrel—and I had to talk to somebody. As a matter of fact, we've separated. I may as well tell you straight off"

"I'm sorry" Hobey said, in the same quiet tone that she was using. "When did this happen?"

"Late last night," Rosalie said. "Or early this morning, rather. We sat up most of the night thrashing things out—and that was how it finally ended. Somewhere around dawn, Bailey packed a suitcase and went. And it was my fault," Rosalie said stonily. "I sent him."

Hobey said, "Look, now. I don't want you to tell me any more than you want to tell me. But if it's going to make you feel better to talk, I'm right here listening."

"I think it is," she said.

Hobey took her hand and folded the fingers tightly under his "Go ahead, then."

"We quarreled about Bailey's girl," Rosalie said flatly. "Did you know he had a girl—I mean a special one?"

"No," Hobey lied, wondering why he didn't say yes, and be done with it. This was his chance; but the habit of sparing Rosalie was automatic. "No, and I don't believe it," he said stolidly. "I mean I can't imagine any husband of yours having a girl."

"That's sweet of you," Rosalie said, with a faint little smile. "But the plain truth is, he's had a number of them. This one's name is Maxine Loomis—have you ever heard of her?"

"Well, yes, around town."

"I never had, until yesterday."

She didn't say who told her, or how she found out. She said instead, "Not that it matters what her name is. I mean, actually I don't suppose she's any more important than the others—not to him, perhaps—but it just happens that she is to me. It's the wrong time, or something. And she's the one too many."

Her voice stopped, and when she spoke again it was to say, "Let's have a highball, shall we? I'm getting grim about this, and—I didn't mean to be grim."

"I'll mix a couple," Hobey said.

When he came back with the drinks, Rosalie sipped at hers in silence for a moment. Then she set it down and went on speaking, as though there had been no pause. The only difference was that her tone was deliberately more casual. "He's always liked women," she said. "It was one of those things I had to get used to—and I never really thought it would be important. It was just women in general, you see, and they were like drinking or any other form of escape—in a way I think they took the place of a lot of things he missed, or felt the lack of. The thing is that, in a sense, Bailey's whole life had been an anticlimax, since the war. He was so terrific then—just as he was in college before that—and nothing else has ever been really exciting or satisfying for him. Oh, I suppose I was, for a while—but that was back in the beginning, and anyway I was part of that whole time. The war was still going on when we fell in love—you knew that," she said to Hobey. "Or perhaps you didn't. We fell in love while Phil was in France. It didn't happen later."

"I did know that," Hobey said "Yes."

"And that was why Phil killed himself. Did you know that too?"

"I thought perhaps it was."

"It was a frightful beginning," Rosalie said. "I suppose a marriage that began like that could never possibly end up well. 'The mills of the gods'—or am I being too superstitious? But I've often wondered about that, and thought about it."

Her eyes were dark with thinking of it now, and then she seemed to brush the thought away, with her free hand that smoothed her forehead in a quick, resolute gesture. "But it went all right for a while," she said. "We were terribly happy at first And then later—when we began not to be—it was my fault entirely. That was during those years when Bailey was coaching at that school. I hated it there, and I behaved inexcusably—especially the second year."

SEES CURE FOR SIGHT DEFECT

Doctor Predicts Color-Blind Victims May Get Their Normal Vision.

INDIANAPOLIS — (NS) - Color blindness can be corrected, according to a report made by Dr. John P. Davey, secretary of the Indiana board of examination and registration in optometry, to Gov. Henry F. Schricker.

"One of the most interesting wartime developments has been reconditioning of the 'color blind,' which should more correctly be designated as 'rehabilitation of those who are color-deficient,' the report said.

"For some time past, a number of optometrists in various sections of the United States have been giving treatments and conducting research in their private practices endeavoring to remedy this anomaly, and although it is too early to quote statistics, yet the results obtained to date not only are surprising, but hold promise of giving permanent relief from this annoying defect. The procedure is relatively simple, but the time required and amount of work employed is cumulative."

RAILROAD HAS 'COFFEE' CARS

WASHINGTON — (AP) — War traffic demands have led the Canadian National railroad to add "coffee shop" cars. The kitchen and pantry are in the middle of the car, with space for 20 diners at each end.

Vegetables are cooked with steam from the locomotive. The cars described in the Commerce department's publication Foreign Commerce, are said to serve patrons faster than regular dining cars.

Gardening for Victory

By ROBERT GEIGER
(AP Feature Writer)

First In a Series

America needs more food this year than ever before in history and Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard hopes every American who can do so will grow a home garden.

"Every town, city and suburban family with a plot of sunny, open space of suitable soil or access to a community or allotment garden, can make an important contribution to our national food program and our war effort by growing a Victory garden," says Secretary Wickard, in an exclusive statement.

"This year we need more food than ever before in history. We need it for our men at the battle fronts and those in training. We need it for our fighting Allies.

We need it to keep the folks at home healthy and strong.

Can't Get Too Much.

"Farmers broke all records in food production last year for the third time in succession. They are ready to do their level best to produce even more this year. All they can possibly produce of most foods will be needed In many cases, more than can be produced on our farms will be needed. We simply can't get too much of some kinds of food. Every farm family, of course, will be expected to have a garden for home use and, if possible, to provide extra supplies of vegetables for nearby markets

"The entire national food situation will be tremendously helped and our total food needs more easily supplied if those who have suitable ground will grow all the vegetables required for the family.

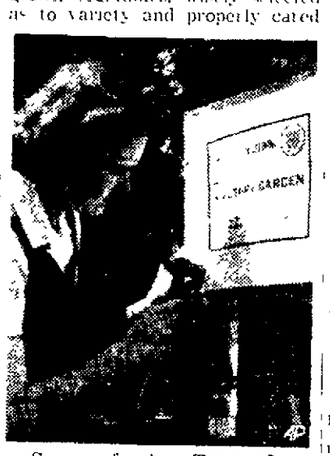
Types Needed Most.

"Special attention should be given to green and leafy vegetables, yellow vegetables and tomatoes because these kinds bring valuable vitamins and minerals right to the family table. Home grown vegetables, wisely selected as to variety and properly cared for not only will provide nutritious food for the family table, but will also lessen the drain on commercial stocks of food in stores and ease transportation problems.

"Growing a garden also will provide the city, town or suburban resident with an interesting, useful outdoor activity at a time when opportunities for normal recreation are limited.

"However, it is important to remember this—select a plot that will grow a good garden and then tend it faithfully. We cannot afford to waste seed, fertilizer, insecticides and labor in 1943 Make your plans carefully and grow a Victory garden even if it is a small one.

"It will help you and it will help our country And remember, home canned vegetables will supplement ration allowances of canned goods!"



Signs of the Times—Jane Dodderar of Maryland nails up a placard to remind you America needs amateur gardeners this year.

FACES TOUGHEST COMEBACK TEST

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — Johnny Hutchinson, Philadelphia lightweight, faces his touchest comeback obstacle tonight when he meets New York's Maxie Shapiro in a 10-round windup at the arena.

If Hutchinson, fresh from three straight knockout-triumphs, can take the bout from the New Yorker, it is likely that he will be paired with Sammy Angott in a March match here—a bout which the Pennsylvania Athletic commission may recognize as a world lightweight title bout.

PRICES MAKE ADVANCES ON STOCK MARKET

Low-Priced Issues Combine To Make Lively Opening For Week's Trade.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK Fractional advances predominated in today's early stock market transactions.

Sizable blocks of low-priced issues appeared at an active opening, most of which were unchanged On the upside were U S Steel, Bethlehem Chrysler, Western Union Kennecott, Texas Co and Deere

Market followers studied the survey of the magazine Steel which said that deliveries failed to improve on most products Especially rounds and flats holding at 10 to 12 weeks with small tonnages available at about six weeks Some producers cannot offer as favorable prices

The publication added that the scrap position was somewhat better and most mills had accumulated from 30 to 60 days receives across the Italian frontier in the Lake Geneva region after the mighty air armada passed southward

New Air Attack Follows Up Assault on Lorient; Rome Admits Loss.

Renewal of the attack on northern Italy and western Germany followed a twin assault by the RAF in which more than 1,000 tons of bombs were dropped on the submarine base at Lorient Saturday night

Britain enjoyed a night of quiet although German planes raided several places on the southwest coast Sunday night killing five persons in one town The Germans said their bombers had attacked the naval base at Plymouth

The trial of fuse and explosion for Lorient Saturday started shortly after 8 p m

The second wave of bombers picked up the glow of fires while still 160 miles from the target the air ministry reported Pilots in this wave reported the dock area was a mass of flames which they could see from one five spaced up to 6000 feet

London has been raided more than 60 times and the Germans announced a week ago civilians were being removed from the city after a particularly devastating attack The port contains pens for 30 U-boats

SEES EVENTUAL GERMAN DEFEAT

But Correspondent Warns of Hard Fighting Ahead For Yanks, British.

enough to make the remainder of the campaign a bloody business perhaps as costly as Algiers for it was to Americans in the World War

Axis morale in Africa has not always been at the best There have been many desertions of men 25 years old with three years campaigning behind them They told their captors that they were glad to be finished with the Russian mud and Tunisian mountains

But there can be no doubt of the value of three years experience in placing machine guns and mortars and beating off infantry charges

The Germans hold all the best defensive positions from the mountains in the north throughout the length of the "Grand Dorsal" and excepting the pass at Pichon which is relatively unimportant, compared to Faid pass which the Allied failed to hold

It seems likely that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel will not make a serious attempt to hold the Mareth line in lower Tunisia with his Afrika korps but will shove northward to the Gabes bottleneck where his lines are less extended and he can cooperate more effectively with Col Gen Jurgen Von Arnims forces

All the Germans are excellently equipped Their use of firearms of all sizes is superb, and particularly so is their use of field artillery heavy machine guns and mortars

Except for the British Eighth army judged the finest Allied fighting force outside of Russia the Allies in North Africa are relatively inexperienced

The British First army has a leavening of men who fought in France but for the most part they need battle experience to get the most from their fine equipment

In some sectors they are still too short of infantry to hold and exploit gains made by heavier formations French equipment is obsolete and despite their magnificent fighting British and Americans do not believe they should have been used except where they were directly needed

(While Patton was en route back to headquarters Gen Alphonse Juin announced that French units were being withdrawn brought up to full strength and re-equipped with the most modern arms)

In the air the Allies are potentially superior and generally possess the edge in type of planes they have engaging to date the German high altitude fighter the Messerschmitt 109 G in Africa The Allies do have planes that are equal to the 109 G however and may be better and they undoubtedly will be rushed to this front

As of now however the Germans can still gain local air superiority for any given action

The gradually increasing tempo of Allied bombing has apparently forced the Germans to keep their air force reserved for front action where actual fighting is the highest That slightly restricts German air activity behind Allied lines Meanwhile more advanced Allied air fields are being rushed to completion and the air picture should be favorable when the offensive starts

On the ground the Allies fight under tremendous handicaps with overlong lines of communications Engineers have done wonders with roads which became quagmires of mud shoes under uniforms but communications are still a headache

Until the Allied commanders can be certain of good weather they cannot move in full strength

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON — It seems inconsiderate to be asking President Roosevelt to do more than he is doing. Yet something is badly needed which only he can do. The country needs to have put into focus its thinking about what is to come out of the war.

A babel of talk is creating dangerous confusion and misunderstanding.

Here Rep. Clare Luce warns in the house of representatives that our government is about to surrender control of the air. But in London members rise in the house of commons demanding to know whether the British government is surrendering its air rights. Vice President Wallace writes a magazine article about freedom of the air although there isn't yet a ghost of a government policy about any of this. Nor about much of anything else aside from the military program. Elmer Davis has an enormous propaganda setup but he has nothing authoritative to talk about except the four freedoms, because there isn't any government policy about what is to come out of the war.

Clapper

I am not trying to be captious. Mr. Roosevelt has more to do in 24 hours than a human being should be expected to do. And on the military side he has done it well. This is not a piece about how everything is going wrong, because I don't think everything is going wrong. On the contrary most of it is going exceedingly well.

The war is moving fast and favorably. I don't find victory over Germany expected this year, but it is considered very likely next year. The Russians are wounding the Germans deeply but another wallop or two may be left in the German army and air force. Hitler will never get the Caucasus. This year probably will bring some other big victories over Germany. Turkey may come into the war on our side.

The Germans are going to be knocked out of Africa. Tunisia may be all ours in another six weeks. Secretary of War Stimson says we must be prepared for casualties there very soon, which is another way of saying that we are about ready to go into action. The powerfully equipped British Eighth army will provide the central blow, but we will be in it plenty. We expect the Germans to fight savagely in North Africa but we are confident they haven't got what it takes to stay there. The Japs seem to be held in the Pacific.

At home, production is in good shape. Headaches over labor supply and inflation are severe, but no more than we should expect considering what violent changes have taken place in the life and work of the nation within the last year.

But there is a harmful delay here in preparing for what is to come out of the war. That is not a distant problem. The issues are already being discussed in the legislative bodies here and in London. The administration here is not yet in a position to take the leadership in any of this discussion, or to guide it wisely. Various administration officials shoot from the hip in all directions and leave the public more disturbed about the peace than about the war.

Public opinion is being confused instead of educated.

The British acceptance of General Eisenhower as supreme commander in Africa is a fact that could be made to contribute mightily toward better feeling and stronger mutual confidence among the Allied nations.

But beyond the fighting, people see developing only the early sprouts of postwar rivalries, with no developments toward anything to bind the winning powers together. That is what makes them cynical to the extent that a recent poll showed 60 per cent believing another big war would follow this one.

These are the harmful consequences, and the signs of disintegration that come from the administration's neglect to prepare for what is to come out of the war. Purple words have done about all they can do toward building a better world after this war. They are rapidly losing their force. Action and leadership by President Roosevelt are needed in this field—the kind of action and leadership that Wilson gave in the last war and that Mr. Roosevelt himself gave during the period leading up to this war.

FLIERS RESCUED AFTER 16 DAYS IN WILDERNESS

Five of Party of Eight Are Brought Out of Rugged Idaho Mountains.

(By International News Service)

BOISE, Ida.—Five army fliers today were recuperating in the Gowen field hospital at Boise after having been lost in the primitive remoteness of central Idaho for 16 harrowing days during which they existed on rations of chocolate and a "darned good broth of woodpeckers and squirrels."

Air patrols, mountaineers and woodsmen joined in a search for three other members of the eight-man crew of a bomber which was forced down Jan. 29 on the shore of Loon lake, 150 miles north of Boise.

Hope was dim for finding the missing three men safe. Their tracks were followed through snow 12 to 13 feet deep until they disappeared in the drifts on the side of a rugged 8,000-foot high mountain.

The five fliers who were rescued were identified by Capt. E. L. Davis, Gowen field public relations officer, as:

First Lieut. Robert R. Orr, pilot, Tacoma, Wash.; Second Lieut. James Z. Kelly, navigator, Warren, Ark.; Staff Sgt. Paul G. Loewen, Tacoma; Staff Sgt. Forrest B. Hoover, Tacoma; Corp. Earl J. Beadry, Portland, Ore.

Of the five, only Sgt. Hoover was injured. He received a broken leg in the emergency landing.

Capt. Davis said the three men still missing were: Second Lieut. Adgate B. Schermerhorn, Ausable Chasm, N. Y.; Staf Sgt. Edward M. Freeborg, Seattle; Staff Sgt. R. Pruitt, address unknown.

The grounded bomber was sighted Saturday by Penn Stohr, a veteran mountain flier who has carried mail, food and mining equipment to snowbound central Idaho mining men for many years. Stohr saw three men on the ground but could not land because of a heavy mail load.

Yesterday he equipped his plane with skis and returned to the scene, accompanied by two woodsmen, Gene Powers and Lloyd Johnson, both of McCall, Ida.

Stohr and his party found five of the fliers "in good condition" despite the privations of their lengthy stay, except for Hoover's broken leg.

CAPITAL DEPOT KEEPS FIGHTING FORCE SUPPLIED

Put Emphasis on Materials To Save Their Own Lives as Well as Kill Enemy.

By ARTHUR BOSTWICK

COLUMBUS —(AP)— High on a wall of a modern warehouse at the army's Columbus quartermaster depot hangs this sign: "Somewhere an American soldier depends on you."

It is a constant reminder to hundreds of civilian employes, many of them women with menfolk in active service, that theirs is a task involving human life.

They are assigned to the vast depot's medical supply section, a clearing house for about 1,800 essential hospital and first aid items headed for American firing lines.

The section, under Lt. Col. John L. Owens, has an almost unique place at the bustling depot, which relayed many supplies for the African invasion. The section's function ultimately is to save soldier lives. Most other divisions of the 600-acre depot contribute to the aggressive phase of the conflict, sending to front lines guns, ammunition, numerous machines, clothing, food rations and other supplies.

From Colonel Owens' section flow supplies to American embarkation ports. Every contingent of troops sailing for battlefronts is fully equipped for emergencies.

The colonel explained the division's role to newsmen touring the depot at the invitation of Maj. Gen. Fred C. Wallace, Fifth Service Command chief, and Col. William J. Calvert, depot commander.

"We assemble and ship complete medical supply units," Col. Owens said. "One of these includes 800 items in quantity, everything in a hospital requiring replacement."

Such a unit includes surgical instruments and dressings, bandages, laboratory equipment, dental supplies, first aid articles, sheets, blankets and nightclothes—sufficient quantities to care for 10,000 hospital patients for one month.

The officer indicated a tier of boxes, remarking "that's equipment to fill the needs of a 1,000-bed hospital, packed for shipment abroad."

One of the tiniest yet most important items is a first aid kit issued to every soldier in action. In it is a little envelope containing sulfanilamide powder. Soldiers are instructed to sprinkle the powder on fresh wounds. It is a powerful anti-infection agent.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

WASHINGTON — This government's war labor, or manpower, program has been referred to as the department of utter confusion. It is such a meaningless mess that nobody understands it. All that is clear is that it is an attempt at conscription of civilian labor, first mentioned last winter by Mrs. Roosevelt.

The program consists of a squeeze play by Paul V. McNutt to force men into war jobs with the alternative of being drafted for combat duty if they refuse, an unworkable and inflationary 48-hour week, and a declaration by Mr. Byrnes, backing up McNutt, that men will have to go to work where they are told, for the going wages.

Pegler

Neither the administration's plan nor the proposed law, offered in the house by James Wadsworth of New York, takes into consideration the fact that the present available supply of manpower is being wasted to a large, but thus far uncalculated extent, through the mock-work system. In either case, a conscientious civilian might be drafted for war work and sent away from his home to make up the loss represented by the idleness of a loafer.

It might be thought that Mr. Wadsworth's proposal would empower the loafer's local draft board to take him off his mock job and send him to work on a real one but if that were tried, his union could whip out a surpeme court opinion and save him from the anguish and ignominy of useful toil.

Mr. Wadsworth plans to introduce an amendment to his bill providing that any person assigned to service under compulsion or accepted as a volunteer shall have a right not to join any union. But the protection of the worker from terrorism by union stewards and agents on and off the job is neglected on the ground that this is a local police matter.

Everyone in the administration concerned in the labor conscription problem shies away from the question of compulsory union membership although it will inevitably arise as soon as compulsion is tried. A man drafted for any of the fighting forces, does not have to join a union but, under McNutt's plan, a man drafted for war work would have to join in some factories. Some conscientious objectors to compulsory unionism are certain to make a fight on that, it which case, the objector would be liable to military conscription but would also have good grounds for an appeal to the courts. Because the selective service law, which McNutt is using for his authority, does not even mention labor conscription in the first place, and in the second, does not authorize compulsory unionism which certainly was not the intent of congress.

But it must be remembered that it has been the policy of the government ever since the enactment of its Wagner act to induce or compel workers to join unions and of the millions who have joined during this time many certainly were driven in against their will and clearly against their rights. If the rights of individuals could thus be ignored in war plants using more or less voluntary workers, many of whom nevertheless were taking the jobs under economic compulsion, the rights of the labor draftees might similarly be ignored for there are those on the union side who would insist that closed-shop contracts are binding even on conscript workers. Before the present supreme court the unions might get away with it and go on from that to refuse membership to undesirables who might then be drafted to fight.

There are questions of personal financial responsibility and commitments which have not yet even been discussed in connection with the labor draft. One man might be made destitute, losing everything acquired by 30 years of toil so that a loafer could stall the days away in a mock-work job, for there is no mention of an income tax moratorium or relief from other responsibilities while he is working for a fraction of his normal and accustomed earnings. Yet, wealth or economic class cannot be made a reason for exemption if labor conscription comes.

This draft and the 48-hour week together are incomplete, incoherent and they constitute a great threat to the remaining security and freedom of the American people.

CITES RECORD WOOL SUPPLIES

National Council Says Scare Buying of Clothing In U. S. Unjustified.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK — The United States today possesses the largest supply of wool in its history and there is absolutely no justification for the "scare buying of clothing," the American Wool council maintained today.

The council, which represents the nation's wool growers and a group of the country's largest woolen mills, warned that the present rush to buy clothing threatens "to load the American public with stores of inferior apparel purchased at high prices."

In deriding frenzied clothing purchases the council pointed out that the war production board has officially announced it will increase allotments of wool for civilian purposes in the immediate future.

This increase will bring civilian textile production to "a point approaching 1939" it added.

The council blamed "injudicious" government publicity regarding possible shortages of wool and of apparel for the present buying scare.

There wasn't much sleeping at the Junior Blue Tri club slumber party at the Y. W. C. A. Saturday night but it wasn't the lack of adequate slumber equipment for the girls brought their own blankets and other paraphernalia. It was because the affair was a complete innovation in the Blue Tri program and every incident that happened provided a new topic for conversation. The chatter ended over doughnuts and cocoa Sunday morning when the girls assembled for a snack of breakfast before going to church.

A lot of ship-wrecked sailors will receive safety razors soon, thanks to the splendid work of Mansfield Boy Scouts last week. Co-operating with the Navy Mothers' club, which received a letter from the Oakland, Cal., club stating that the supply of razors on the west coast could not begin to fill the orders needed to replace those which are being lost everytime a ship sinks, the Scouts started a house-to-house campaign and collected more than 300 used razors. Troop five led in the drive, collecting 66, while troop 20 finished second with 50.

SEEK POULTRY CEILING RELIEF

Cleveland Dealers Threaten To Suspend Business Unless OPA Makes Change.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Retail and wholesale poultry dealers of Cleveland have threatened to suspend business unless relief from OPA ceiling restrictions is obtained by Saturday, Feb. 27.

Announcing this decision after a meeting of the Cleveland retail Poultry Producers association, Vice President William Gold, speaking for the group, commented:

"Under the regulations any profit is impossible. If we can make no profit there is only one alternative and that is to close up shop."

Gold explained the threatened action would not affect the market for boxed or frozen poultry.

A committee representing the association today scheduled a conference with officials to outline the problems of the wholesalers, the wholesale dressers and the retailers with a view of obtaining quick action.

Most of the chicken consumed in Cleveland comes from Ohio and Indiana farmers who also sell to Detroit and other areas at higher prices, it was said.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

The Street of Dreams.

Manhattan is a wide-awake island—smiles gleam, eyes sparkle, and music with laughter is its round-the-clock sound effect. On Broadway, the natives know you can't be caught napping if you'd have your dreams come true. And although the night club bands don't get around much any more to playing "I'm Dreaming of a White Christmas," the nocturnal haunts are still the haunts of dreamers.

Those who do their day dreaming on the late shift—after dusk, before dawn—have high hopes of realizing their craziest imaginations, because on the Broadway beat it has happened over and over that yesterday's nonentity became tomorrow's celebrity. In show business you find that the Man of the Hour used to be just the Man in the Street.

What's in a dream? That depends on who happens to be weaving the wishful pattern. If it's the doorman, he's sure to be wishing for a soft job inside. Didn't it happen to Eddie Garr, who hailed taxis for the trade at a local nitery before he became a comedian earning a four-figure salary? The chorus girl dreams of being spotted by a talent scout who will whisk her away to Hollywood and far flung fame. Why not? Wasn't that the way it happened with Joan Crawford, when you come to think of it?

The waiters dream of the next day's races and the long shot they're planning to retire on. The proprietors dream of a happy time when there'll be no multitudinous tax return forms, no curfews, no temperamental performers, no shortages and hundreds of customers who don't ever insist on a ringside table. All lovely young girls who chauffeur elevators (and a few who aren't so lovely) dream that what happened to Lamour will happen to them. And as for Dottie, now that all that has happened to her, she has nothing left to dream about — except that some day she may win an Academy Award for acting.

You don't need shoe leather when you're walking on air, and a fond hope is more warming than a steaming cup of java, so it's swell that they can't ration dreams. Broadway Rose dreams of being gowned by Don Loper—and having Abe Lyman chase her, for a change.

Georgie Jessel dreams of columns filled with stories about Greta Garbo's crush on him. Clerks in the fancy Fifth avenue shops dream of the day they'll be on the buying side of the counter. . . . Understudies dream of the night when the star won't come out, because of a convenient (but not fatal) illness.

Senor Wences, the Spanish ventriloquist, dreams of the hour when his dummy, Johnny, will speak English without the slightest trace of an accent. . . . Every borscht circuit comic dreams of becoming another Danny Kaye, and having a material writer like Sylvia Fine right in the family.

Universal Draft Proposed

REGISTRATION of women between the ages of 18 and 50, and such a universal draft as appears to be contemplated in bills introduced in house and senate, seem more designed to meet the tragic requirements of a last ditch fight to win the war against overwhelming odds than an intelligent approach to actual needs of either the present or probable future.

Before any such drastic step is taken, or even seriously contemplated, sane procedure for the moment seems to require prompt appraisal of present use of available manpower in essential industries, including voluntary women workers, and sound estimates of various requirements for workers—agricultural, industrial and in other lines of necessary employment—in addition to the number of men and women really needed in military and semi-military service.

The United States was originally designated as "the arsenal of democracy"—later extended to include the obligation to supply large quantities of food to Allies and victims of Axis aggression.

Now, in addition to meeting a large share of war requirements in ships, planes, tanks, guns and other battlefront supplies, and also in addition to shipping abroad immense quantities of farm products, meats and processed food supplies, it is being seriously proposed that 11,000,000 Americans be in military service by the end of this year.

There are now approximately 6,500,000 men in service, with best information indicating that 1,500,000 of these are somewhere overseas — or less than one-fifth of the number War Manpower Director McNutt envisions under arms by the end of 1943.

Meanwhile industrial and agricultural production—two vital essentials of effective United States participation in the war—are already suffering from the drain of manpower into military service and civilian employment in a multiplicity of governmental departments and overmanned bureaus.

The contemplated check-up of "manpower utilization" in factories, offices and on farms, should, by all means, carry through to the point of proving or disproving a growing belief that production of war materials is being vastly slowed by union restrictions which prevent workers from doing more than a specified maximum per day—a peacetime expedient designed to spread and extend employment and to equalize the output of efficient and inefficient members of the organization.

Some instances of this form of restraint on production are cited in the following excerpt from the New York Times: There are union rules imposing restrictions on the use of spray-guns for painting; rules that prevent the use of prefabricated materials in building; railroad "full-crew" laws that exist merely for the purpose of creating needless jobs; regulations that require the "employment" of a new truck driver, whether he works or not, whenever a truck crosses a state line; a number of practices under which union plumbers insist on cutting off threaded ends of delivered pipe so that they may do the job again, and electricians insist on tearing electrical wiring out of prefabricated houses so that they may install new wiring, and theatrical scene shifters insist on the employment of a crew of scene shifters even in plays where there is no scenery.

By a fair and thorough check-up of practices in war industries, and "manpower utilization" in general, it should soon become known to the government, and to the public, whether there is any real need to further endanger American homes and children by either drafting housewives into industrial employment or extending military forces beyond the point at which the United States can continue to serve as the arsenal and breadbasket of democracy.

These are subjects on which your congressman and senators will appreciate hearing your views. Address your congressman: Hon. J. Harry McGregor, House Office Building, Washington, D. C., and your senators: Hon. Harold H. Burton and Hon. Robert A. Taft, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Puerto Rico's Sugar Surplus

PUERTO RICO was getting along right nicely, some say, before Tugwell. Others think it wasn't getting along too well for the native population—life was sweet only for the big sugar producers.

Trouble began when Axis submarines backed up a crop and a half of sugar on the island by sinking the ships which should have carried the sugar away and other foods and commodities back. Although the soil is very fertile, the islanders have depended on the mainland for most of their food supplies, devoting their own agriculture to sugar, pineapples and only a few other products. Governor Tugwell seems to have been trying to get the native farmers to diversify their crops so that the island, in emergency, could be more nearly self-contained. With only a little less sugar grown, and many other forms of food, it could easily feed itself over a long period of ship-stringency if necessary.

Diversification of crops is usually a good idea and seldom interferes much in the long run with returns from the main crop. But changes are always hard to get used to, and doubtless the governor tried to accomplish too much in too short a time, thus stirring up unnecessary antagonism to the program itself.

Time is needed to prove the value of any new idea. But it doesn't look, from this distance, as if it would do either farm families or sugar producers much harm if the island produced a few more beans, onions, potatoes and hogs.

Essentials of Sound Tax Plan

STRIPPED of political camouflage, congress faces two inescapable duties in formulating future tax policies.

First, a tax law must be perfected which will provide a practical method for millions of individuals who never paid taxes before, to pay taxes on income as earned.

Second, the tax structure must not destroy productive enterprise and profit, thereby eliminating tax income for the government at its source.

This will not be so difficult to do if politics can be eliminated from the formula.

If there's to be rationing of shirts it would seem advisable for one coupon to be usable March 16.

WELL! WHERE IS EVERYONE?

Moving Mountains to Aid Russia

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

SOMEWHERE IN IRAN—Up here under the Elburz range to escape the wintry blasts sweeping down from Russia, Uncle Sam's soldiers assume responsibility for another major war job—developing and maintaining the Soviet lines of supply to the outside world.

Of course, United States experts long have been working on this lifeline, which runs a difficult and often hazardous course northward from the Persian gulf. The task has been shared, however, by Great Britain.

There's a great deal of streamlining going on at headquarters here, under direction of Major Gen. Donald H. Connolly, a gray-haired man of few words, who looks as though he could move mountains and likely will have to move literally hunks of them before he is through.

He is from the same piece of cloth as two-fisted chief of staff Brig. Gen. S. L. Scott.

By spring it is hoped the volume of supplies to Russia will have reached the peak which has been promised.

There is no doubt in the minds of any of the men here concerning the importance of the job assigned them. That was made clear by Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the U. S. army service of supply, who visited them after attending the Casablanca conference.

"Right at the top of the list of things to be done is to supply Russia," said Somervell. "In other words the guiding principle is to get the maximum amount of materials to Russia. That's your job. Give it everything you've got."

That purpose was reflected in the words of Lieut. Col. E. F. Brown, one of the key men in this great effort, who told me:

"Our sole goal is to supply Russia."

AND that is reminiscent of another declaration which I heard not long ago in Chungking from American headquarters which is maintaining the air thread that connects the Chinese with the Allies through a labyrinth of mountains lying between China and India. That was:

"Our sole business in life is to keep our transports flying over this route and protect them from Japanese war planes."

I don't believe these two fervent pledges are a coincidence.

My observations in many theaters of the war lead me to think these objectives are unselfish promises of service to others. I've talked with our officers and men from Ireland clear across Africa through the middle east on into India and China, and I know there is a tremendous amount of idealism back of their war effort. An American staff officer confided to me his hopes of an altruistic post-war world and the way he said it sounded like a prayer.

Well, anyway, if that seems too fanciful, it can at least be said that this gulf service command is shouldering a job which can bring plenty of grief and danger without the reward of a Broadway confetti parade. Sure, I quite realize there is no fighting in this particular zone but if you think it is all Persian delights you should take a ride northward through the mountains.

THE AMOUNT of transport which passes over this route to Russia must play a big part in determining whether she has the striking power to keep up her magnificent offensive. Another way to put it is that the length of time it will take to knock out Hitler completely may depend on these supplies to the Russians.

The American service command has a great program on hand and it will make good reading when the time comes to talk about it.

It's going to be an American show, for not only have we brought over our own personnel but our own equipment for various activities.

In order to facilitate co-operation with our Soviet allies our men are being taught Russian.

Health and Diet

Take Care of Eyes

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

PROBABLY one of the most annoying features of advancing into middle age is the fact that your eyes begin to serve you less well. You are constrained to have a pair of glasses and you have to have them around you all the time and if you go off somewhere and forget them, you are in a terrible state.

This blurring of vision, which is perfectly natural and due to the hardening and loss of elasticity of the lens of the eyes, leads a great many middle aged people to general apprehensions about the state of their eyes. They want to know whether they can continue their activities and whether they should spare their eyes. They should know first—and it should be stated emphatically — that healthy eyes do not have to be spared in any way.

Eyes were intended to be used all the time during waking hours, and if you have any difficulty in seeing clearly in the distance or in reading, something is wrong. It is probably because you need glasses, or if you are wearing glasses, they do not fit.

Sensible To Use Glasses.

Some middle-aged people fight against the use of glasses and go through all kinds of discomfort to avoid wearing them. It won't do any good. If your eyes can't focus on the book as clearly and as comfortably as they used to, the only sensible thing to do is to get your reading glasses.

Exercises won't help. Neither will waiting and "giving the eyes a rest." Don't worry about your eyes becoming dependent upon reading glasses. Of course they will, if you need them. But that is only a theoretical and not a practical objection.

The moving pictures will not do any harm to healthy eyes. Nor is there any reason why middle-aged people should try to spare their eyes by using dark glasses.

There are two forms of eye disease which occur in middle age and early old age and which produce dimming and blurring of vision. These are cataract and glaucoma. Both of them are organic diseases and both of them are amenable to treatment. Therefore, if you have any blurring and dimming of vision which is not relieved by glasses, you should go to an oculist for an examination.

If your blurred vision is due to cataract, it doesn't make a great deal of difference whether you go to an oculist right away or put it off for a few months. However, your vision will never be better until the cataract is cured.

Glaucoma is entirely different. It is due to increased pressure and hardening of the eyeball and this pressure damages the optic nerve with the result that whatever damage is done can never by restored. Therefore, treatment should be begun immediately. You may suspect glaucoma:

1. If the vision is blurred or "smoky."

2. If close work bothers you in spite of frequent changes of glasses.

3. If there are halos or rainbows around lights, especially at night.

4. If there is eye pain after movies, in dim lights or after emotional upsets.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Offer of Million Dollars Credit To Spain Confirmed By New Book

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—In December, 1940, Secretary of State Hull issued a caustic, categoric denial that he had ever offered a $100,000,000 credit to Dictator Franco of Spain.

Today is published a book, "Appeasement's Child" by Lieut. Thomas J. Hamilton, U. S. Navy, who was in Spain at the time and tells in detail how the American Ambassador Alexander Weddell offered Franco a $100,000,000 credit.

The book is one which should be read by everyone who wants to understand the state department's long history of appeasement in Spain, France, Japan, Germany and North Africa.

Lieut. Hamilton relates how in the winter of 1940, Franco was riding roughshod over American interests, how the Fascists were thumbing their noses at the United States, and how all this culminated in the stoning of the American embassy by a gang of Fascist students from the University of Madrid.

"Ambassador Weddell had informed Serrano Suner (Spanish foreign minister and Franco's brother-in-law) that a hostile demonstration was planned and even named the day," writes Lieut. Hamilton. "No extra guards were provided, however, and even the two usually stationed in front of the embassy were absent when the gang came up and started shouting its opinion of the United States. When Mr. Weddell came out, one of them grabbed his arm and tried to hold it up in the Fascist saluate."

Then the gang began throwing stones, and some enamel was chipped off the seal of the United States over the doorway. Weddell immediately asked for an interview to protest the incident.

Dollars for Stones.

BUT, continues Lieut. Hamilton, "over a week elapsed before Mr. Weddell was able to see Franco . . . At last, however, the interview took place, and we offered the once famous $100,000,000 credit instead of demanding an apology. This sum was to be used for wheat, gasoline, rubber, cotton, meat — the five products necessary to prevent the Franco regime from collapsing.

"Perhaps suspecting that some elaborate Anglo-Saxon plot was lurking behind this ingenuousness, Franco was not over enthusiastic. He agreed, however, for Mr. Weddell to discuss details with Serrano Suner the following week. The interview went off rather well, and Serrano Suner agreed on behalf of his brother-in-law to accept the credit if the United States would be satisfied with the phrase 'if it is not foreseen' that Spain would enter the war instead of a flat promise" (not to enter the war).

Lieut. Hamilton goes on to state that when the American public learned of this astonishing transaction, the reaction "was highly unfavorable, and Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced that although Franco had requested a $100,000,000 credit, he had been refused."

Franco Finally Saved.

THE Washington Merry-Go-Round at about this time published a statement that Hull had offered the $100,000,000 credit to Franco, but that Undersecretary Welles had gone over his head to the president to oppose it.

Referring to this, Lieut. Hamilton states: "Whatever the disagreement within our own government, it seems to have been the sudden veto by Hoare (British Ambassador Sir Samuel Hoare) that finally brought its rejection. His change of heart apparently resulted from the fact that the Franco regime, interpreting the offer as a sign of weakness, suddenly resumed its forward policy in Tangiers in defiance of pledges to the British. At the same time, several of the most prominent British businessmen in Spain were arrested."

Lieut. Hamilton goes on to report that later Franco got a credit totalling $110,000,000 in a roundabout way from Argentina. We offered Argentina a $110,000,000 credit, but it was rejected, and how the matter was arranged is still a secret.

However, Lieut. Hamilton reports that finally "the Argentine deal went through in January, 1941, at a time when Spain had just two weeks' supply of wheat left . . . Argentine maize started pouring in when the nation was down to her last stocks, and Franco was saved to fight another day."

Note: Greatest worry on the part of Gen. Eisenhower in North Africa today is that Spain will team up with Hitler and attack us. To protect against this a good part of the U. S. army has to be stationed all around Spanish Morocco. A drive from Spanish Morocco could completely separate U. S. forces in French Morocco from those in Algeria.

Mrs. Hopkins' Party.

GOSSIP about Bernie Baruch's party for Mrs. Harry Hopkins has reached such fabulous proportions that in fairness the facts should be stated. Mr. Baruch, now 72 years old, never drinks, eats sparingly, almost always goes to bed by 9 p. m. If you phone him after 9:30 p. m., he is impossible to reach unless there is sickness in the family. Usually, he limits dinner guests to four people.

On the occasion of the Hopkins party, Baruch told the maitre d'hotel at the Carlton: "I don't want a big party, Joseph. I'll pay for what they eat."

Joseph replied: "Leave it to me."

Bernie now regretfully mourns: "I did."

Busy with other things, spending most of his time trying to speed up war production, and having no women in his household, Bernie knew nothing of what was to be served until he entered the dining room. He says now he wishes he had been trained to be more domestic.

The Roving Reporter

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN NORTH AFRICA—(By Wireless)—Four good soldiers who have already done more than their share in the war have been down in these parts lately. They are Kay Francis, Martha Raye, Mitzi Mayfair and Carole Landis.

Some people may take lightly the contributions of Hollywood folks to the war effort, but I don't. These gals work themselves to a frazzle. They travel dangerously. They live and work under mighty unpleasant conditions. They don't get a dime. They are losing a lot and they have nothing to gain—nothing material, that is.

But surely they are going home with a warm inner satisfaction, knowing that they have performed far beyond the ordinary call of duty.

This quartet of stars has been away from America since October. They flew the Atlantic by Clipper, toured the camps in Northern Ireland and England, and came to Africa by Flying Fortress. They have heard bombs fall, and they know about army stew.

They've averaged four hours' sleep a night. Each of them has had a bout with the flu. They have done all their own washing, because there's no other way to get it done. Yet if they chose they could all be in California lying on the sand.

WHEN they came out to our far desert airdrome they put on their performance on the flat bed of a big wrecking truck out in the midafternoon sun, surrounded by soldiers sitting on the ground. They spoke the first English from a woman's mouth these soldiers had heard in months. To say they were appreciated is putting it mildly.

Half the fun and half the good, I suppose, of such a performance is the opportunity it gives the soldiers in the audience to imagine themselves as great lovers, and the inspiration it provides for the soldiers' own brand of humor.

Kay Francis starts it off by saying they'd rather be here than anyplace in the world. That brings a thunderous cascade of boos. Then she says:

"The reason is there's no place else we could be the only women among several thousand men."

That brings the laugh. Then she says:

"And I know every one of you would protect me, wouldn't you?"

That brings the "Oh yeah!"s and yells and whistles of appreciation.

When Carole Landis finishes her song and holds out her arms a pathetic, wracked voice comes from the far edge of the audience, a lonely guy screaming to the world his comical misery:

"I can't stand it!"

Mitzi Mayfair wears a skimpy green spangly thing and does her famous dances. A couple of dozen soldiers are perched on the truck's big steel boom above her, and every time Mitzi kicks they pretend to swoon and fall off.

Mitzi ends her act by calling for jitterbug volunteers. The boys are bashful, but finally a private is pulled down off the boom. He is no slouch as a jitterbug, but she almost dances him off his feet. She winds up by throwing the exhausted soldier over her shoulder and carrying him off the stage.

SOMETIMES Mitzi gets herself in a pickle with this stunt. One night in England she had to carry off a guy who weighed 225 pounds. Another time she sprained a shoulder. And in her second performance at this airdrome she almost met her Waterloo.

This show was for flying officers, the ones who actually do the bombing and fighting, and there's nothing bashful about them. When Mitzi called for volunteers, up rose Capt. Tex Dallas, a Fortress pilot who doesn't give a damn about anything.

Tex took off his coat, folded it neatly, and walked challengingly onto the stage. Mitzi whispered instructions to him, but Tex doesn't follow instructions very well. Instead of pretending to be exhausted, he had Mitzi on the ropes within a minute. After chasing her around the stage he finally had her hiding behind the piano. The audience went wild.

Eventually, after poor Mitzi had given herself up for lost, Tex relented and let her carry him off the stage.

The program winds up practically in a riot when all four girls sing the French, British and American national anthems.

The Home Game

DISTANCES are not great between the little villages in our basketball league, but school rivalry is keen. The local team never lacks a cheering section, although since bus transportation of athletes and sports fans is out for the duration, all who get there must travel in motor cars.

The other night four carloads of jubilant fans came back from a game away. Each had the same idea—to ring the school bell and announce our victory. But some had loitered an hour or more on the homeward journey, so the hell kept ringing intermittent spasms, far into the night . . .

I sat with my wife, high on the central bleachers for the last home game of the season. Facing us, the stage of the gym-auditorium was ranked with the local high school students. When my eyes had adjusted themselves to the bright lights, I picked out my own youngsters among the heads across the way. Other parents and grandparents, all about us, were doing the same. Every youngster there, whether he knew it or not, had rooters in the audience.

I noticed a navy lad, home on furlough, and I thought, in sterner matters than games the same is true—"we're with you team, so fight, fight, fight!" The cheerleaders took over—opposing players warmed up—the regular thump, thud, of the ball accented a rhythm of rippling muscles and streamlined motion. Smell of perspiration and new leather—the ball through the net—my wife grabbing my arm and yelling "Yippee!" We had scored.

The visitors were good players, handsome boys in new gold and purple shirts and shorts. They made some fine long shots.

But what's this at the half? From behind the scenes a drummer led in our brass band. They quickstepped into a whiteclad semicircle and swung their gleaming instruments into position. Songs of the "Gay Nineties," each piece acted out by costumed characters.

Little Annie Rooney, in a merry widow hat, leaned on the arm of a mustachioed, Lothario-like young buck with long coattails, spats, cane and derby. How their schoolmates whooped! Cops chased a robber in and out between the skits; two girls did a tumbling act; Mr. Casey "waltzed in with the strawberry blonde, and the band played on" . . . then here came the bicycle built for two, that same Lothario but courting "Daisy" now, and she did "look sweet" on the handlebars, with her coquettish little hat above one eye, her bustle and her high heels. They made a sight not soon forgotten by their friends!

The last half of the game went fast. We lost.

"I reckon nobody'll ring any bells around here tonight," remarked someone behind me as we slowly edged out through the big doors into the cold night.

"Naw"—that was a home villager—"but we beat them the last time, on their floor—and even if our team didn't win, the crowd'll come back. That show was worth the money . . ." Which gives, I believe, a fair index of the sportsmanship down our way.
